

Duke University Summer Camp

The Duke University Summer Camp programs including a variety of courses that include the sciences, the humanities and the arts. Gifted kids who are interested in science will find a course to take, but so will kids who are more interested in creative writing and even the performing arts.

The programs run for about two weeks and are available to kids in grades five through eleven, although the range varies depending on the course. Local students can opt for the day camp option, but for those students who live too far away, a residential plan is available.

Meeting the needs of gifted children during the summer months can be challenging due to the emotional and social aspects of gifted children. The Duke University Youth Program is a wonderful way to challenge yet engage gifted students while accommodating their academic levels.
